

GIMME SHELTER

Notes on Pras

Musician Pras, best known as a member of the Fugees, has been looking for downtown digs in between bouncing around the country and taking trips to Haiti. He recently checked out 104 Charlton St. in SoHo, with Barak Realty broker Doreen Fuentes.

The unit he saw is a three-bedroom, three-bathroom, 3,234-square-foot residence that's available for $12,975 a month. It includes an open 48-foot-long living area with exposed brick and built-in bookshelves, a chef's kitchen, a home theater and a windowed en-suite master bathroom with a steam shower and limestone floors.

"I'm back and forth right now," Pras says. "I'm in LA and Miami, so I have to figure out, do I want to stay in New York more or LA, depending on work."

Pras adds that he's also been doing a lot of work in Haiti.

Regular readers of this column know that Pras has been in a legal dispute with the Platinum, at 247 W. 46th St., over his deposit on a $2.46 million condo. (In June 2010, we reported that Pras claimed he was promised 12-foot ceilings but only got 9-foot ceilings. A spokesperson for the developer said that the lawsuit "has no merit whatsoever.")

The suit is "still ongoing," Pras says. "But we're confident. Hopefully it will be resolved soon."
