In the wake of the financial crisis that ripped through the country, real estate pros did their best to keep their heads above water in 2009. As 2010 commences, The Real Deal asked a number of New Yorkers hailing from different parts of the real estate industry why they are glad 2009 is over. Here is what they said is their top reason:

Barak Dunayer, president of Barak Realty:

I'm not particularly happy 2009 is over. It was a pretty good year for us. But I'm always happy about new chapters and 2010 presents excellent opportunities.
